

<http://www.worldgolf.com/>

Golf News for Wednesday, June 2, 2010 | Instruction

Keiser University's College of Golf has begun holding classes

The new campus training facility at the Keiser University College of Golf has begun holding classes for their Associate of Science in Golf Management Program. The 20,000 square-foot facility includes a 1,500 square foot indoor putting green that features a fringe and 9 holes. This state-of-the-art technology includes a 3-D motion swing analysis system by Taylormade, a high-tech, interactive golf simulator, as well as a golf club repair lab.

Dr. Eric Wilson, PGA Master Professional and Vice President for the College of Golf said, "By taking advantage of our high-tech training systems, our students will have a fully educational hands-on experience to prepare them for the golf careers of their dreams. We have placed a great deal of effort into the design of the facility and all of our equipment has been fully betted and tested by golf professionals." remarked Wilson. By taking advantage of our high-tech training systems, our students will have a fully educational hands-on experience to prepare them for the golf careers of their dreams. We have placed a great deal of effort into the design of the facility and all of our equipment has been fully betted and tested by golf professionals.

The golf industry provides employment for over two-million people in the United States from Pro Shop Managers to tournament operators to course and club staff and managers. Graduates of the program can be eligible for a golf career in as little as 16 months with an Associate of Science in Golf Management and they will have earned sex credits toward those required for PGA membership Dr. Arthur Keiser, the Chancellor of Keiser University remarked "The golf industry provides employment for over two-million people in the United States from Pro Shop Managers to tournament operators to course and club staff and managers. Graduates of the program can be eligible for a golf career in as little as 16 months with an Associate of Science in Golf Management and they will have earned sex credits toward those required for PGA membership," he added.

About College of Golf Keiser University

Located in Port St. Lucie, Florida, the College of Golf, Keiser University offers a 16 month curriculum and an Associate of Science Degree in Golf Management. The golf college prepares students for a career in pro golf as well as employment opportunities in the golf industry. The fully equipped indoor training facility features all of the tools necessary for beginners to understand the sport and become skilled golf players, industry leaders, and golf facility operation experts.