You never have a second chance to make a first impression. Whether you're doing a mock or real interview, looking for an internship at a career fair, or visiting a company's information table, you want to make a strong first impression. You might be a student now, but you want to be a professional in your field. Even if you are going into a more casual work environment, you will want to present yourself in the best way possible. When you begin the interview process and ultimately land a full-time job, your wardrobe will need to reflect your new level of professionalism. When you begin searching for a full-time job or professional internship, invest in one or two comfortable, attractive suits you can wear to all your interviews. Once you secure a job, slowly add clothes to your wardrobe that reflect your office's business environment. You can save money by shopping the off-season sales and buying shirts, slacks, skirts, and jackets that you can mix and match. Stores that have professional attire and sales throughout the year include Macy's, Kohl's, Ann Taylor, & Talbots.
