To whom it may concern,

This letter is in support of Keiser University as it is asset to our community. Keiser has partnered with the Els for Autism Foundation to provide training to the Golf Academy students on how to teach golf to people with autism and other developmental disabilities. Some of the students volunteered their time during our afterschool golf program on campus. In addition, Keiser's nursing students have participated in a practicum rotation with our campus nurse to learn hands on strategies for working with people with autism.

We were fortunate enough to hire one of Keiser University Golf Academy's graduates, Dan Hulsey. He is a great example of the well rounded education that Keiser offers its students. He is talented, professional, reliable, and a great writer.

We look forward to a continued partnership with Keiser University as work together to make a difference in the lives of people with autism, their families, and the professionals that serve them.

Sincerely,
