To Whom It May Concern:

As a professional educator, it is with great pleasure that I have had the privilege of seeing some of my former students obtaining various degrees from Keiser University (KU).

Keiser has a pragmatic curriculum, which has enabled students to obtain experience in their field of choice while studying the academics associated with their individual career.

An example of this would be a student training in a supportive medical field. The student would dress as a professional and complete partial training at a nearby hospital affiliated with KU.

This hands on approach better prepares graduates for real life involvement and familiarizes them with their jobs. One can assume their first day on the job is a productive one.

A few years ago, two of my students, a brother and sister both applied to KU for medical training. Both were excellent academics and had received funds from different scholarships.

One of these students ranked as one of our top-graduating seniors and won a scholarship from this fine university. It is my present understanding she is now a successful nurse.

As a veteran teacher of over thirty years, I can appreciate the many programs of KU.

Cordially,

Kenneth L. Kessinger, EdS.
