To Whom It May Concern,

Keiser University is important to our community because it offers wonderful support for various user groups across the Tampa Bay area.

I founded the Tampa Bay AWS User Group early last year. As the organizer, one of the challenges I continually face each month is finding suitable meeting space that does not require a fee to be paid. I have had two of my meetups on the Keiser campus in Tampa, most recently hosting over 100 user group members with the very topical content of Machine Learning.

This user group focuses on cloud technologies, and I have enjoyed partnering with Dr. Tammy Ferrante. She is a wonderful person to work with and is very passionate about ensuring that your university maintains close ties with the technology community. By allowing us to have meetups on your school grounds, we are facilitating the sharing of common technology challenges and solutions to many different companies within the Tampa Bay area.

I have recently started another cloud user group, specifically a Microsoft Azure user group. I will most certainly be reaching out to Dr. Ferrante soon to schedule future meetings at Keiser University for this group as well. I appreciate the support of the university in extending the reach of our technology user groups.

Warm regards,
